Issues related to the right against self-incrimination and to criminal investigations can be an ethical minefield. What do you do when your witness is the subject of a show cause order for possible perjured testimony? When can a party or a witness plead the Fifth Amendment? Your corporate client is the subject of a criminal investigation, do you have a duty to tell the employees the personal consequences before they are deposed in an unrelated civil suit? This panel will address issues that civil lawyers need to consider to protect their clients and themselves.
